1 Comp increase and the 90-day rule

90	+1 day	X%
working days, logged in and in the office	it kicks in the next day after your 90th	on commission TBD

The news: "You're all going to get an increase in comp." Some of you get it now. The newer people wait on the 90-day rule.

If you just got here, there's a 90-day grace period on the comp increase I'm giving. You need to be here in the office 90 working days first.

90 means 90 working days. Logged in and in the office. Not 90 days from the day you were hired.

Promotion: it's yours. It's X% on commission. It just starts paying after your 90th working day.

When it kicks in: the next day after your 90th working day. Active from then on.

2 Bonuses this month, paid in cash

Under 90 working days? For the time being you get a bonus based on your contribution to the team goal this month. Your percentage of the pie. amounts: TBD

Why this way: "I think that's the fairest way to do it."

Everybody gets a bonus, paid in cash, handed to you at this meeting.

Note to me Open what the bonus is based on for people already past 90 days

Note to me pull the cash from the bank the day before and hand it out at the meeting.

3 I'm building a business here

My goal for every one of you: I'm building a business here, and I want to keep putting people under you.

Full time only: I'm not putting anyone under somebody who isn't here full time.

Full time: something that has definitely changed things around for me.

4 My comp, and where it goes

My level: I only started this job in June. June was my first month, so my commission level probably isn't as high as you may think.

Where it goes: I spend quite a bit on you guys. A lot of what I make goes to the team.

Headphones: everybody's wearing a $400 pair.

Mini PC: everyone's going to get a $750 mini PC.

Monitors: you're going to get your own, the same wide curved screen I have.

Keyboard and mouse: you'll get the same ones I use, $250 each.

Same as mine: my own computer costs more, but yours will behave the same way mine does.

5 Outshine me

"I want to give you every opportunity to outshine me as much as you can."

Start thinking about treating this like a business, so that one day you won't have to.

And one more thing: then you can put people under the people you bring in.

6 Housekeeping: who writes the policy

Also general housekeeping. Need a policy written? Go in this order, carriers first, then people.

1. Newbridge
2. AHL (American Home Life)
3. American Amicable
4. AK Me. Only after American Amicable. If I'm not around or I'm on a call, I probably shouldn't be giving anyone my login.
5. MD Mark. If I'm still busy, go to Mark.
6. Nobody free? Rare for all of this to happen in a row, but if Mark isn't there either, use the underwriting rule below.

7 If nobody's free: the underwriting rule

Only after you've tried everyone in section 6 and everyone is busy.

Tell the client you've submitted everything to underwriting. You have to wait and see what you hear back.

Set the wait: it shouldn't take too long. You'll be back with a decision in just a bit, probably tomorrow.

What underwriting tells you: whether it's worth it for them to apply at all. If so, you walk them through it.

Have them save your number as "James, the insurance guy" (or your own name), so the callback doesn't get missed or flagged as spam.

8 The underwriting script, word for word

Say it like this. The client's side is the lighter lines.

"Yeah, okay. So it was sent to underwriting, which is totally normal. That happens a lot."

"It just means there's something in your file history that's coming up as a flag. That's fine. It happens a lot."

"Do you have any idea what that might be?"

Let them talk.

"They're going to want me to call them tomorrow morning and sort of explain."

"So I'm happy to go to bat for you. I won't tell them more than they need to know."

"But I'm the one who needs to know, so I know what to keep from them."

They tell you.

"Awesome, cool. Okay, I'll clear it up tomorrow morning."

"As soon as I get off the phone with them, I'm going to give you a call."

They say okay.

"Thank you very much, sir. I'll be in touch shortly."

"Save this number as James, the insurance guy." (or your own name)

"I don't want it to get missed or go to spam and not even ring. Sometimes it doesn't even ring."

"Just save this phone number, or at least remember the area code."

"I'll give you a call tomorrow, okay?"

They say okay.

"All right. Have a great evening."

Then hang up. That's the order of operations when nobody is there, everyone is busy, and you've tried everything. Do exactly this.

9 Also on your Team meeting list

These three are open cards from your Notebook. Keep or drop them.

W-2 base against commission, paid every two weeks: ask if they'd be interested in W-2 pay every two weeks. First half of the month a set amount. Second half, whichever is greater: the rest of a $60,000 salary level, or their commission minus what was already paid. Also ask if everyone is cool with a gym membership on you, plus a 401k match and health insurance. Gauge the room.

Stop over-explaining the Social ask, for Matt: over-explaining sounds like convincing and comes off desperate. Pre-frame it as the medical background check, "three verification questions, it's for the MIB", assume the authority, ask, then let them talk. If they still say no, drop it clean.

Denied leads are good training reps: give new or remote people the leads already denied everywhere. Easy conversations, they learn to write apps, and real leads feel like easy mode after.
